Composition:

It is a small plant, whose seeds, lentils are distinguished by the region where they have grown, owner of climate and the earth. Also for their color. The lentils have a high starch content, proteins, minerals, especially iron. Containing approximately 25 % 30 % of protein for which occupy second place after the soya. The lentils are very rich in vitamins B, which we all know, constitute the vitamins suitable for the functioning of the nervous system. Among all stresses the niacin or vitamin B3, together with the thiamine, pyridoxine and riboflavin, contribute to maintain the nervous system in good condition. Contain increased quantities of folate that the agency transformed into folic acid (Vitamin B9) whose shortcomings are responsible for the appearance of symptoms of depression or bad mood.
